ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN.
ABSOLUTE CRYSTAL PRECISION.

The limited-edition Axis Collection was born out of a unique collaboration between Moser glassmakers and an emerging star in the design world, Laurids Gallée, who the prestigious Architectural Digest ranked amongst the 100 most influential figures in his field.

This marks Laurids Gallée's first time ever working with glass, a material demanding absolute concentration and ample time. Built on craftsmanship passed down through generations, Gallée consciously chose the Moser glassworks for his premiere. This collaboration also fulfils the vision of Moser's Creative Director, Jan Plecháč: To connect the traditional mastery of Czech crystal with the distinctive personalities of contemporary design.

FOR ME TO WORK WITH SOMEONE
WHO’S TAKEN THEIR ART TO SUCH PERFECTION.”

The architecturally precise crystal pieces play with light as a structural element – guiding it, affording it rhythm, and providing its clear direction. Their inspiration is rooted in early 20th-century modernist architecture, where the structure itself becomes an ornament.

ROSALIN COLOUR

Rosalin, the iconic Moser colour, is presented in the full range of its transformations here - from rich, pink-brick tones to shades so delicate as to nearly dissolve into the clear crystal.

THE AXIS VASE IS A CHALLENGE OF CRAFTSMANSHIP,
STARTING AT THE ACTUAL FURNACE.

It's blown into a sharp-angled mould, while the most demanding task lies in forming the perfectly round core using only the glassblower's breath. Achieving a harmonious piece requires experience, sensitivity, and absolute concentration.

LAURIDS GALLÉE

The wedge cuts are the key element of the Axis Collection, placing extreme demands on precision; they must be etched with a tolerance of no more than a tenth of a millimetre. Only then will the individual surfaces and angles align perfectly, creating a unique visual effect.

The wedge cut is crafted by expert cutter Miroslav Maděra. The excellence of his work is based on maximum precision, patience, and artistic talent, reflecting his 30 years of craftsmanship experience.

DESIGNER LAURIDS GALLÉE

The renowned Rotterdam-based designer and graduate of the Design Academy Eindhoven. In 2024, he was named in AD100 (Architectural Digest 100), the prestigious annual selection by Architectural Digest recognising the 100 most influential figures in architecture and design worldwide. Laurids Gallée's works have been displayed at the Stedelijk Museum in Amsterdam, amongst others, and the designer has collaborated with luxury brands like Dolce & Gabbana and Hermès.
